

QUIZ: PUNCTUATION

Add punctuation to the following sentences. You will not need to add commas.

1. When in Bangkok they prefer to travel by tuk tuk, which is a cross between a taxi and a tricycle.
2. Volker claims that the bro code applies to his pet badgers and not just to humans.
3. Let's wait to redo the shutters I want to make sure that we have enough orange paint.
4. Only one instrument is really worth learning to play the glockenspiel.
5. Henrique can be a real airhead sometimes.
6. I have been working on a poem that I call Microwaved Popsicles.
7. This is not to be confused with my recent novel, Microwaved Popsicles.
8. Its clear that the turtle, tired of the ill-treatment that it had been receiving, turned on its master.
9. Are those zeros or just os on your homework?
10. Why, oh, why, exclaimed Hollingsworth, is it impossible to find banana jelly these days?

QUIZ: PUNCTUATION KEY

Add punctuation to the following sentences. You will not need to add commas.

1. When in Bangkok they prefer to travel by tuk tuk, which is a cross between a taxi and a tricycle.
2. Volker claims that the “bro code” applies to his pet badgers and not just to humans.
3. Let’s wait to redo the shutters; I want to make sure that we have enough orange paint.
4. Only one instrument is really worth learning to play; the glockenspiel.
5. Henrique can be a real “airhead” sometimes.
6. I have been working on a poem that I call “Microwaved Popsicles.”
7. This is not to be confused with my recent novel, Microwaved Popsicles.
8. It’s clear that the turtle, tired of the ill-treatment that it had been receiving, turned on its master.
9. Are those zeros or just o’s on your homework?
10. “Why, oh, why,” exclaimed Hollingsworth, “is it impossible to find banana jelly these days?”